Editors' Preface

With this volume, the first Supplement to the Social and Behavioral Sciences, seven Supplements to the 11th Edition of AMERICAN MEN OF SCIENCE have been published.

Beginning with the Third Edition published in 1921, new editions have appeared at approximately five-year intervals. But with the rapid growth in all fields of science during the past two decades, there has been an increasing demand for more current information on the American scientific community. To publish new editions at more frequent intervals seemed impractical—the current 11th Edition ran six volumes for the Physical and Biological Sciences, with some 130,000 entries, and two volumes for the Social and Behavioral Sciences, with 30,000 biographies. Therefore, to meet this demand, the publisher and editors have undertaken a series of Supplements.

Paperbound Supplement 1, for the Physical and Biological Sciences, was published in July, 1966, and covered the alphabet from A-G; clothbound Supplement 2, March, 1967, cumulated the information from Supplement 1 and gave new data for A-K. Paperbound Supplement 3, July, 1967, supplied new material for A-O, and clothbound Supplement 4, February, 1968, cumulated the data from Supplement 3 and gave new information for A-Sr. Supplement 5, April, 1969, and Supplement 6, February, 1970, both covered the alphabet from A-Z but did not cumulate data from the other Supplements.

The six volumes embracing the Physical and Biological Sciences were published as follows: the A-C and D-G in May and December, 1965, the H-K and L-O in May and December, 1966, and the P-Sr and St-Z in May and December, 1967. The two volumes covering the Social and Behavioral Sciences were published in September, 1968.

The Supplementary Service includes complete biographies of scientists whose data were received too late for the base volumes or who have become eligible for inclusion since these volumes were published. The criteria for inclusion in AMERICAN MEN OF SCIENCE remain the same for the Supplements:

1. Achievement, by reason of experience and training, of a stature in scientific work at least equivalent to that associated with the doctorate degree, coupled with presently continued activity in such work; or
2. Research activity of high quality in science as evidenced by publication in reputable scientific journals; or, for those whose work cannot be published because of governmental or commercial or industrial security, research activity of high quality in science as evidenced by the judgment of the individual's peers among his immediate co-workers; or
3. Attainment of a position of substantial responsibility requiring scientific training and experience of approximately the extent described for (1) and (2).

In addition, the Supplements are designed to give significant new data on scientists whose biographies appear in the base volumes. This information covers changes in position and address, deceased notices, and a few other items of importance. It must be remembered that the Supplements are not intended to take the place of full revisions and should be used in conjunction with the complete biographies given in the base volumes or Supplements of the current edition. Therefore, identical information has not been repeated and the following have been held for the 12th Edition, scheduled to begin publication in 1970:

Personal data, such as marriage and additional children.

Corrections in dates or other refinements in educational data, past positions, and affiliations.

Society memberships, fellows, election to office, and awards and decorations.

Alterations to Military Service entries.

Changes in publications or field of research.

Some corrections to past information have been included in cases when the error or omission detracted from an individual background.

As in the Supplements for the Physical and Biological Sciences, new information was obtained for this Supplement by sending questionnaires to scientists whose complete biographies were included in the base volumes of the Social and Behavioral Sciences. The response has been gratifying. Many have replied to this appeal who have not responded to similar requests for previous editions. We are deeply appreciative of the time and trouble involved in sending detailed information. Much has been received that will make the 12th Edition revisions even more complete.

Pertinent new information was included in the cumulative Supplement 2 for approximately 9500 scientists whose biographies are to be found in the base volumes of the Physical and Biological Sciences of the 11th Edition, plus some 2500 new biographies. Cumulative Supplement 4 added new data for 13,650 others, as well as 4700 new biographies. Supplement 5 gave new information for over 17,000 scientists whose entries appear not only in the base volumes but also in the previous Supplements, and some 8800 new biographies. Supplement 6 included new data for more than 17,500 as well as approximately 8800 new biographies.

The first Supplement to the Social and Behavioral Sciences, presented in this volume, provides new information for more than 4400 scientists whose biographies are to be found in the base volumes, as well as approximately 3800 new biographies. Among the new biographies are a few whose entries appeared in earlier editions but who were not located in time for publication and, as a result, had only a reference in the 11th Edition. Subsequently, new addresses were found and their complete biographies are given in this Supplement.

It has been the aim of the editors to include essential new information. Suggestions and criticism on our selection will be welcome so that any succeeding issues of the Supplements can be made increasingly valuable to users of AMERICAN MEN OF SCIENCE.

The continued cooperation of the vast number of individuals and organizations interested in science has made this compilation possible. Acknowledgement is gratefully extended to the Advisory Committee, to the individual scientists, to all scientific societies, and to the university and colleges of the United States and Canada for their continued assistance and cooperation. Sincere appreciation is due to the guidance and support of Mrs. Anne J. Richter, until recently Editor-in-Chief of the Book Editorial Department of the R. R. Bowker Company.

Every effort has been made to avoid errors in the listings—with the certain knowledge that some have escaped us. We have used our best efforts to edit the material submitted within the scope of the established format, but have no legal responsibility for accidental omissions or errors in entries.

Abbreviations

American Men of Science has tried to economize on punctuation since the first edition published in 1906, and has used only one punctuation mark at any point. Also, since many societies have the same initials, it has been found necessary to use abbreviations in place of initial letters, for their titles. These abbreviations are generally self-explanatory, or can be found in the following list:
